Sanitary Inspector

Public health workers in Kentucky soon will be augmented by the addition of five sanitary inspectors who will be graduated from the School of Public Health, operated jointly by the State Board of Health and the University of Louisville, in January. These men all will be sent to counties out in the State, and the Board of Health now is prosecuting inquiries to learn where they are most needed and where they can be used most effectively. Each of these men, in addition to having pursued technical and theoretical studies in the School of Public Health, last summer was given practical work under the supervision of the health officer in one of the full time health department.

In connection with its present investigation of the places where these men are the most badly needed, the State Board of Health also is conducting an investigation to see what is the general need for sanitary inspectors, in order that, if it is found desirable, the facilities offered this class of public health workers in the School of Public Health may be expanded.

Gas Consumption Increasing

"A few years ago gas companies thought they had reached the limit of the extent of their business when they sold annually 1,000 cubic feet per capita of population. The demand has grown until today it is between 6,000 and 10,000 cubic feet per capita."

Grandchild had Croupy Cough

"My grandchild could get no relief whatever from a very bad croupy cough," writes Peter Landis, Meyersdale, Pa., "until I gave him Foley's Honey and Tar. Coughs, colds, croup, chest and bronchial irritations quickly relieved with Foley's Honey and Tar. Sold Everywhere."

Electric Service

Even the uninitiated in the mysteries of electricity know that lurking in or about the wiring to which they unconcernedly attach lamps, plug in the suction cleaner, connect up the iron or washing machine, or any of the numerous present day electrical household essentials, is a supply of energy ready at all times to render service. Few, however, realize the magnitude of the energy awaiting utilization day or night in Clay City. It is equivalent to about 1½ horsepower in the ordinary residence installation. This means a store of energy sufficient to lift a ton, 2,000 feet in an hour, to elevate the temperature of 6 gallons of water 100 degrees in the same time, or to boil away over 2½ quarts.

The uninitiated would scarcely care to lift a ton even a foot in an hour and certainly would hesitate to take liberties with the amount of heat required for either of the two simple heating operations. Yet we will unconcernedly use and not infrequently abuse this supply of electrical energy.

It is indeed one of the wonders of the age that 40 per cent of the residences in this country have harnessed within them 1½ horse power to aid with light, heat and power in the performance of household tasks, and with a degree of safety quite unparalleled in the history of the world.

Corn Cob Value

Besides the wood alcohol content in corn cobs, there are nine other valuable products to be made from this insignificant off-cast. Agricultural college professors claim that the day will come soon when the value of the cob will contend for an almost equal value of corn that grows around it.

A Wish

"I HAVE TAKEN Cardui for run-down, worn-out condition, nervousness and sleeplessness, and I was weak too," says Mrs. Silvie Estes, of Jennings, Okla. "Cardui did me just lots of good—so much that I gave it to my daughter. She complained of a soreness in her sides and back. She took three bottles of Cardui and her condition was much better."

"We have lived here, near Jennings, for 26 years, and now we have our own home in town. I have had to work pretty hard, as this country wasn't built up, and it made it hard on us."

"I WISH I could tell weak women of Cardui—the medicine that helped give me the strength to go on and do my work." This card fulfils her wish.
